

My Weekend at Blackpool by Ed (9th – 11th December 2011)

My favourite part of the weekend was when we went for a Ruby Murry (curry). I met Raj a waiter who couldn't do enough for us. I had soup to start, with a keema korma and egg pilau rice as main course. Afterwards we called into the local to have a drink and play dominoes.

Next day the sun was shining but the wind was blowing a gale so we headed indoors and visited the Sea life Centre. The sharks were amazing, as we walked through the tunnel they swam over our heads.

From there we went to the Blackpool Tower to watch the Wizard of Ozz panto and circus. I was clapping and shouting with the music and booing the wicked witch.

That night we went out for tea again, this time Italian. My favourite dish this time was the cream brulee without the brulee. We called in again at the Farmers Arms pub. This time I met a young lad who had also been in the army.

During breakfast the next day I met up with some friends of BLESMA, Sylvia Andrew and the two Arthur's where we said our goodbyes.

There was just enough time to buy some presents and rock before heading home.

I've had a wonderful weekend and met some lovely people. I hope I can do it again sometime.
